Feb 2, Wed: Imbolc called St Brigid's Day and later called,

Candlemas—is the cross-quarter between the December Solstice and the March Equinox. This is the first glimmer of spring as days continue to lengthen, the sun warms, and we notice the urge to renew—This is a seed point in both our inner and outer realm. Traditions include fasting, spring cleaning—removing the old in preparation for a new astrological year at the Spring Equinox.

Imbolc means “in the belly” and is associated with ewes’ lactation that begins in order to nourish their babes during this lambing time.

The original festival was associated with the goddess ‘Brigid’, a daughter of the Dagda, or sun god, Lugh. This Celtic Fire Goddess, Brigid, brings healing, purification, renewal, fertility, and creativity at Imbolc. St Bridget is often referred to as ‘Mary of the Gael’ —Daniel relates this to Spica. This Full moon, 5000 years ago, would have been conjunct Spica, the star that represents the most radiant expansion of the feminine. Candlemas was the name given to Imbolc when Christian tradition overlaid pagan days of celebration and gave a new name and meaning to them. The church’s ceremonial candles for the year were created at Imbolc.
